Q1. Were you able to contact important past leaders and others from the community who moved away from the area?

Because location was no longer an issue, we were able to have the new incoming president, who was at the time based in CA, be the moderator for the events. For the events themselves, many were still heavily involved with Queens College. In terms of oral history collection, the virtual world has enabled people to reach out to past alumni of Queens College and other members of the community who might no longer live in the general vicinity.
